Dear Bettye Guerin-Burns:

My husband and I are extremely grateful for the opportunities that the mentors of Leading Legacies, Reading Enrichment Program, have provided for our 7-year-old daughter, Sadie. Although Sadie has always had a large vocabulary, when she joined the program last year she was reading and writing below her grade level. In addition, Sadie attends an immersion school (Mandarin & Spanish) and my husband and I were concerned that her English reading and writing might be further challenged as she continued through grade school. Within a few months of following the Scientific Learning program through Leading Legacies, Sadie's reading proficiency had improved. Her progress has been steady and notable, and she is even starting to write short stories of her own, creating wonderful worlds like those she enjoys in books! Sadie also loves all of the women who lend their time and talents to foster literacy and reading to the students of Leading Legacies—they are terrific roles models and Sadie looks forward to learning with them every week.

Sincerely,

Tori Rice
